Food storage in plants

How to do this task:

- Drawn below are four different ways plants store food to help them survive during the winter.
- Cut out these diagrams.

- a) Place each example you have been given next to the picture of the type of plant storage organ this example is.
 - Look at an example of a tap root and a tuber.
- Apart from size, describe the main differences between them.

Published on Assessment Resource Banks (https://arbs.nzcer.org.nz)